ORIGIN AND CAREER OF NATIONAL CLUB.

The National Club was originally organized and the club-house erected to give the "Canada First" party a "local habitation," and it has ever since continued a centre for the spread of Canadian national sentiment, which was the main idea of its founders. The results—so important and far-reaching,—should be kept before the membership, and with this object in view, we give a brief outline of the club's origin and history.

Shortly after the confederation of the Canadian Provinces a few of our young men, realizing the great importance of a spirit of national unity, determined to devote themselves to the cause of fostering this sentiment as far as lay in their power, apart from all political bearings or personal opinions. Prominent among them may be named Henry James Morgan, Charles Mair, Robert Grant-Haliburton, George Taylor Denison, and William Alexander Foster. Dr. John Schultz, afterwards Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, joined them and did yeoman service in the cause. Gradually their ranks grew and as the new party began to feel its strength their non-political creed of patriotism rapidly increased in favor with the people.

The platform adopted by the Canada First party was as follows :

1. British connection, consolidation of the Empire, and in the meantime a voice in treaties affecting Canada.
2. Closer trade relations with the British West India Islands, with a view to ultimate political connection.
3. Income franchise.
4. The ballot, with the addition of compulsory voting.
5. A scheme for the representation of minorities.
6. Encouragement of immigration and free homesteads in the public domain.
7. The imposition of duties for revenue, so adjusted as to afford every possible encouragement to native industry.
8. An improved militia system under command of trained Dominion officers.

9. No property qualifications for members of the House of Commons.
10. The re-organization of the Senate.
11. Pure and economic administration of public affairs.

The future greatness of Canada was foretold, not as an argument for a declaration of independence, but as an additional motive for continuing British connection. Among the ranks were a few who held that the time would soon arrive (if it had not already arrived) when Canada could stand alone and abandon the protecting aegis of Great Britain,—that she could fight her own battles, make her own treaties, and have her own diplomatic relations with other powers. While these visions were harboured and encouraged by only a few, it to a certain extent militated against the influence that the Canada First party was beginning to wield. The majority, however, frowned upon such revolutionary doctrines, and cherished only the hope of making Canada the greatest and most prosperous unit in the British Empire.

In 1874 the Canada First party took a more concrete form by the creation in that year of "The National Association." The charter for the National Club was issued on the 6th of July, 1874, and the Club was opened as the headquarters of the party by a dinner which took place on the 30th of March, 1875. The late Chief Justice Moss was then in the field as Parliamentary Candidate for West Toronto and his candidature was endorsed by the Canada First party, which looked to him as an upholder of the principles for which it was striving. Mr. Moss was elected and the strength of the new factor in the political arena became apparent. Among those to whose exertions the formation of the Association and the Club were due, were the late Mr. W. H. Howland and the late Mr. W. A. Foster, previously mentioned as one of those who started the movement in 1868. Mr. Foster whose death occurred in 1888, was a man of exceptional ability; as a writer he wielded great power, and his energy was indomitable. He was foremost of a number of Canada First men who brought out the "Nation," an independent weekly journal, which treated all questions on the broad lines of national patriotism and which had a very successful career for two years, until circumstances compelled its withdrawal. It was most actively identified with all the movements of the party which so largely owed its existence to him, although his modesty caused him to remain in the background.

It was but a few years after the institution of the Club that the two great political parties of the time in a large measure adopted the platform of the Canada First party. Owing to this, the Association gradually disappeared from public view. It had done a good work however. It had greatly strengthened a sentiment of unity amongst the Provinces, and of cohesion amongst the people. It had presented more clearly than had yet appeared, a popular Canadian ideal, and it thus helped to lay the foundation of the dominant principle in the Dominion at the end of the century—" Canada First, within the Empire." In the second place, the movement left behind it the National Club, which has proved a potent factor in the social life and independent thought of the Provincial Capital. The chief planks of the platform on which the National Association was built, viz: "Imperial Unity," "the Consolidation of the Empire," and "closer trade relations" remained as the watch-words of the National Club, and it gradually became the centre of the Imperial Federation movement in the Dominion.

The first Directorate of the National Club consisted of twenty-eight members, one-half of whom represented the stock-holders who originally furnished the Club (taking a mortgage on the building for the amount of $5,500 payable in twenty years without interest), and the other half represented the regular membership of the Club. The first officers were :

President	Dr. Goldwin Smith.
1st Vice-President	W. H. Howland.
2nd "	John McNab.
Treasurer	John Gillespie.
Secretary	T. C. Scoble.

During the first year of the Presidency of the Hon. Adam Crooks the Club was found to be embarrassed financially, and the stockholders who furnished the Club generously presented the Club with the mortgage for $5,500 on the building. The financial basis of the Club was unsatisfactory, involving as it did personal liability of members, which led to a special Act being obtained from the Ontario Legislature reincorporating the Club under which a reorganization took place. This Act is still the Charter of the Club.

During the Presidency of Lt.-Col. Denison financial embarrassment again occurred, but by the energetic efforts of a few of the members, it was again restored to a satisfactory basis.

In 1892 it was felt that the club premises were behind the requirements of the times, and this fact combined with the increase in the number of Clubs in Toronto, rendered great improvements necessary to enable the National Club to maintain a place in keeping with its traditions. In the year 1893 an arrangement was adopted by a very large meeting of the members for the purchase at $17,500 of the leasehold building and premises formerly the home of the United Empire Club on King Street West, and then occupied by the Canadian Pacific Railway for offices. The Club paid $2,000 on account of this purchase money. Plans were prepared for alterations and improvements to the building involving an expenditure of $30,000, and a sum over $9,000 was actually subscribed by members towards consummating the scheme. Delays occurred throwing the matter over till 1894, when the financial depression which had become widespread by that time so affected the Club that it was found impossible to raise the funds required. These circumstances and others acted very prejudicially to the Club membership, and it was felt in 1895 that some radical means had to be adopted to keep the Club in existence. The United Empire Building purchase was happily got rid of by giving up the deposit of $2,000 which had been paid and which procured the Club's release from liability. In 1895, upon the initiative of President Frank Arnoldi, Q.C., a scheme was adopted by the members for carrying out enlargements and alterations of the existing club premises in conjunction with the landlord involving an expenditure of $13,000 on the part of the landlord and about the same amount for furnishings and decorating by the Club. This scheme was carried out between April and November, 1896. During the alterations the Club occupied as temporary premises the buildings Nos. 94 and 96 Bay Street to the south of the Club House.

In November, 1896, the Club returned to the enlarged and commodious quarters prepared for it and entered upon an area of prosperity unparalleled in its history.

It would be impossible in a brief sketch to detail the influence that the National Club has exerted upon the nation. Ever since its organization numerous social and patriotic meetings have been held, disseminating the opinions of our members and laying broad and deep those cherished principles which to-day are so highly valued by the Canadian people at large and which so deeply concern the welfare of the Dominion and the Empire.

The position of President has been filled as follows :

CHAPTER 66.
